

Section I – Masterclass #67 – A Geomantic Life with Alanna Moore, November 22, 2025- 1:00 pm Central Time

Alanna was born in Sydney Australia. She was introduced to dowsing when living in London and joined the British Society of Dowzers in 1980. Returning to Sydney and befriending a well-known dowser Isobel Bellamy, she helped to found the New South Wales Dowzers Society in 1984.

The only founder remaining, she helped the society celebrate its 40th anniversary in Sydney in November 2024. She now lives in Ireland.

Alanna has been a professional geomancer for over 40 years, mostly in Australasia, Asia and Europe. She specializes in the more unusual applications of detecting spirits and applying dowsing to improved gardening.

She studied Permaculture Design and gained 3 diplomas from Bill Mollison, the originator in the 1990s; while also assisting the movement by helping produce the Permaculture International Journal.

Alanna's talk will describe some of these experiences, plus dowsing adventures and how her understanding of the subtle earth energies and Other dimensions of life has developed over time.

Section II – Sponsoring a Masterclass

I have to be a pest and ask - Why has our sponsor well dried up? Here's the skinny on the Quid pro Quo for Sponsors. Masterclass Sponsor Information.

Sponsorship is a two-way street.

Sponsors get recognition in our Saturday emails, in our monthly newsletters and a live 'commercial,' right before the Masterclass begins. How cool is that?

USPA gets a bit of a financial boost to help pay for all the bits and pieces that go into presenting these amazing classes.

Currently, our Saturday morning blasts go out to over 3,600 people! Yes, close to four-thousand people across the globe are invited to join together for an hour or more – totally free, to listen to a scientist who gives his or her time – freely, that one of our main objectives: "To promote the free exchange, discussion and dissemination of information, theories, ideas and practices related to psychotronics" can be fulfilled on a continuous basis.

You might think – how expensive can it be – just Zoom, right? Well, that is the tip of our iceberg. We have several computer systems to be maintained and updated (at least every 7-10 years! 😊). We do pay for Zoom, for the ftp system that maintains our recordings, for MailChimp to keep you all informed and for a website to stuff full of all this information! Oh, and we also have a physical storage unit for all the cool stuff we need to put on a conference like the one in July in Crystal Lake.

So, if you are interested, the nuts and bolts of sponsorship are right behind this door.

Click on it and then, email Scott Beutlich to set it up at uspsychotronics@yahoo.com
You'll be in great company. See section XIV.

In terms of geomancy, she was informed by the wisdom of Australian Aboriginal peoples' paradigms, plus reading widely in the research undertaken to write her 12 books that are mostly on geomantic subjects. In 1993 Prof Phil Callahan came over from the US to teach about his energy discoveries and Alanna went on to make hundreds of the 'Power Towers' he inspired, that stimulate plant growth and crop production.

Alanna was also informed by colleagues and friends whose clairvoyance revealed the invisible dimensions of the spiritual realms. Travels around Australia to Aboriginal sacred sites opened up a world of fabulous nature spirits and she found that she could also dowse their presence.

Alanna's talk will describe some of these experiences, plus dowsing adventures and how her understanding of the subtle earth energies and Other dimensions of life has developed over time.

Section VI – In case you missed October's 66th Masterclass –

USPA presented “Psychotronics: From Old Masters to New Technologies”- with Alexander Suprun

Alex Shares some Supplement Information Too – Below the description of the class.

About the Class: Alex says, “Radionics represents one of the earliest attempts to create instrumentation for mind-matter interaction. While initially developed by Dr. Albert Abrams in the early 20th century, modern understanding of quantum mechanics and brainwaves coherence has shed new light on how these systems might actually function – thanks to the Old Masters, the Founding Fathers of USPA (Bob Beck, J.G. Gallimore, Tom Bearden, Bob Beutlich, Andrea Puharich, Marcel Vogel, Al Bielek, and many more!)

The key principle of any old and modern psychotronic device is its ability to create a connection between human consciousness and subtle energies. What's fascinating is how this aligns with scientific quantum mechanical principles of observer effects and non-local interactions.

Our research takes this foundation into the quantum mathematics realm, using modern technology and the latest mathematical theories (Teich Muller, Kletichka, Kalouza-Klen, Feynman) to measure and validate these interactions. A psychotronic computerized interface enhanced by portable Neurofeedback Headsets, serves as a structured way to focus consciousness and intent, while our quantum and brainwave measurements provide objective data about the resulting interactions.

Think of it as creating a technological bridge between mind and matter - where consciousness meets quantum reality in a measurable, reproducible way. This forms the basis for our recent hybrid computer software / electronics hardware developments, some of them “spiced” with Artificial Intelligence interpretation, which I will demonstrate. What sets our approach apart is the integration of modern science theoretical frameworks with practical psychotronic implementation, allowing researchers to explore consciousness-reality interactions using reliable, reproducible methods.

About Alex Suprun: Alex is an engineer by education, digital specialist by trade and a devoted psy & esoteric researcher by heart. Born under the Soviet “Iron Curtain” and briefly exposed to its psychotronic technology phenomena there, he dedicated the last 6 years of his life trying to merge ancient wisdom, unclassified research and modern technologies into compact and most powerful systems which can be used to defer Evil and help people restore and protect their health.

Alex teams up with anyone seriously interested in exploring the next generation of psychotronic and radionic technologies and groundbreaking ideas. Currently he works with a few dedicated people around the world to advance the existing platforms to a completely new level and explore practical ways to integrate the latest AI models with advanced psychotronic systems.

His group website is: <https://alsuprun.com/> Alex lives in a rural area near Montreal, Canada.

From Alexander Suprun wrote: “And here is the Radionic Universal Command I promised, below.”

Section VII - John Reed Shared An Announcement: A Company is Formed to Fund Breakthrough Technologies and Benefit USPA

A new company called Breakthrough Technologies Investment Fund (BTIF) has recently been established for the development and production of highly innovative devices in the psychotronics, healing, and new energy fields.

BTIF was founded by John H. Reed and Nick Begich, Sr. who together are providing $100,000.00 as initial investment funds for inventors and developers of such devices. They have generously offered that any net income or other benefits from investments of their initial $100,000 will go to USPA. It is hoped that others with a strong interest in the development of breakthrough technologies in the psychotronics, healing, and new energy fields will join with BTIF, so that the investment fund can grow and be able to fund even more inventors and startup companies.

Proposals and applications for funding are being accepted, but with the clear understanding that any funding is contingent upon thorough due diligence. BTIF will consider proposals for the following types of devices:

1. Psychotronic and other technologies affecting the brain and mind. These would include devices whose use will enhance memory, intelligence, learning, or knowledge acquisition; enhance psychic abilities of any kind, such as remote viewing, telepathy, psychometry, or spiritual healing; enhance the placebo and other mind-body effects to treat one's own diseases and disorders;

2. Health, wellness, and healing devices: Devices using micro-currents, electromagnetic waves, magnetic fields, sound waves, subtle energies, scalar, or torsion field technologies: to diagnose or treat diseases and disorders of any kind, but especially microbial diseases, cancer, Alzheimer's, and drug addiction; to counteract the negative health effects of 5-G and other negative waves and fields in the environment; to enhance the immune system; and devices that have anti-aging and rejuvenation effects, such as the Dotto Ring, the Priore machine, and Lakhovsky technology.

3. New Energy and Propulsion Devices: This would include any device that generates usable electricity or propulsion operating on new principles of energy production, such as zero-point energy, vacuum energy, magnetic fields, anti-gravity, water as fuel, nitrogen as fuel, or any other "free energy" method.

The development and production of any of these devices could potentially have a dramatic effect on the betterment and advancement of humanity. So, if you have developed or are developing any such device, or know someone else who has done so, please send us information or a proposal, and we will follow up with you. Please send all communications by email, with attachments, if necessary, to John H. Reed, M.D. at joreed43@gmail.com. You can also phone 443-858-0757. Our mailing address is: Breakthrough Technologies Investment Fund, 6800 Roosevelt Ave., #701, Allen Park, MI 48101.

Dan Taylor offered a link to an article by Cecilia Giulivi and Richard Kotz: “Earthing effects on mitochondrial function: ATP production and ROS generation.”

Abstract

Mitochondria are central to cellular energy production and the regulation of oxidative stress. Traditional methods for assessing mitochondrial ATP and reactive oxygen species (ROS) rely on metal probes, which unintentionally ground the system, confounding results. To investigate the impact of grounding on mitochondrial function, we utilized fluorescence-based experiments to assess these mitochondrial outcomes under three conditions: wired (grounded), sham, and naïve. Mitochondria under grounded conditions produced significantly more ATP (by 5–11%), reduced ROS production (by 22–33%), and decreased mitochondrial membrane potential (by 5–6%) than sham and naïve. These findings indicate that grounding improves mitochondrial bioenergetics by reducing oxidative stress. Future research should explore the broader implications of grounding over time on mitochondrial health and its potential therapeutic applications.

Mitochondria under grounded conditions produced significantly more ATP (by 5–11%), reduced ROS production (by 22–33%), and decreased mitochondrial membrane potential (by 5–6%) than sham and naïve.

“Grounding, or earthing, refers to the direct contact of human or animal skin with the Earth's surface. This may occur through bare feet, hands, or grounding devices facilitating conductive interaction with the Earth's surface. Contact with the Earth neutralizes excessive oxidative stress and ROS, thereby influencing the body's physiology.

It is noteworthy that humans and all other animals have been in direct contact with the ground continuously until contemporary times, particularly in the 1950s when insulating synthetic-soled footwear was introduced

Earthing offers numerous wellness benefits—as evidenced by research based on clinical trials and randomized clinical trials—indicating that grounding individuals promptly improves their mood and decreases fatigue, enhances vagal tone and heart rate variability improves blood circulation and viscosity regulates cortisol levels, diminishes blood glucose, promotes better sleep, mitigates inflammation, and alleviates delayed-onset muscle soreness or pain in general, among various other health benefits (<https://earthinginstitute.net/research>).

The observations above, including those regarding the effects of earthing on reducing muscle damage without improving the energy cost of running or the physiological responses of elite athletes prompted our investigation into the impact of ROS and ATP during grounding on mitochondria.”

Dan also recommended the October, 2025 article “The Art and Science of Map Dowsing” by Stephen Melody, a 40-year Veteran of the Craft.

<https://paranormaldailynews.com/science-map-dowsing/6617/>

Map dowsing is a technique used by some dowsers to detect underground water sources remotely on maps or satellite images of a property. It is used to make preliminary investigations which are followed up by field dowsing to select the most suitable drill site. Steve Melody is a professional water dowser with over 40 years of field experience dowsing for underground water in Australia.

Map Dowsing for Underground Water

Map dowsing is a technique used by some dowsers to detect underground water sources remotely on maps or satellite images of a property. It is used to make preliminary investigations which are followed up by field dowsing to select the most suitable drill site. Water well spudder drilling rig in Kimball, West Virginia Image copyleft: Image taken by me, released under GFDL, Pollinator 06:23, 23 February 2006 (UTC) CC BY-SA 3.0

There are several benefits of using map dowsing compared with traditional field dowsing. A map dowser can quickly determine if there is any accessible underground water on a property. If no water is available, this saves the dowser from needless on-site searching and the property owner the cost of a dowser’s field audit.

Large properties can take a field dowser a considerable amount of time to cover the entire area on foot and their progress is often hampered by restrictive terrain or groundcover. Map dowsing can reduce the search time on such large properties to just an hour or so. By selecting potentially suitable drill sites in advance of a field visit, the map dowser can proceed directly to them without the need for searching the whole property.

Water drilling is an expensive undertaking and an error on the part of the dowser because of poor judgement can cost their client dearly. In parts of the world like the United States, bores are routinely drilled to depths of 500 feet. If the result is a dry hole, the landholder will suffer a large capital loss and still have no water. Dowsers must adopt the attitude that they cannot be irresponsible with their client’s money. Map dowsing is a valuable strategy dowsers can use to minimize the risk of financial loss by their client.

Making Risk Assessments

Map dowsers can access information that is available beyond the boundaries of the property to be dowsed, providing them with a detailed picture of the underground water distribution and water quality characteristics in the area. This information, not normally accessible by field dowsers, assists them in conducting risk assessments and making sound judgements that result in a high probability of drilling success.

Establishing a bore that flowed at the time of drilling is no guarantee that it will continue to be productive during droughts when demand on aquifers is high, but aquifer recharge doesn’t occur. Flowing bores that later become dry bores are often poorly sited by the dowser. Map dowsing provides the dowser with a global perspective of conditions below the surface of a property and its surrounds. This allows them to choose drill sites less likely to fail in droughts when it is critical for landholders to have a guaranteed water supply.

In my area, conventional field dowzers have a rate of success averaging 60%. However, drillers employing dowzers who utilize the map dowsing technique often attain a strike rate over 95%. My own record through using map dowsing exceeds 99%.

The Mechanics of Map Dowsing

In field dowsing, the dowser detects interruptions in subterranean rock strata that could contain water with the dowser registering a dowsing reaction from their instrument when they are directly above such areas. When a dowser utilizes map dowsing, they detect the same locations as a field dowser without having to be on site. The mechanism of how a map dowser achieves this feat is not yet understood and consequently, map dowsing should be considered as a phenomenon with no current scientific explanation.

Evidence for map dowser efficacy does not currently meet scientific standards. However, the extraordinary accuracy of map dowzers in repeatedly detecting scarce water sources from considerable distances cannot be explained by chance, demonstrating that map dowsing deserves scientific investigation.

Fitzgerald River National Park in Western Australia CC BY-SA 3.0

When map dowsing, I believe that the signal I receive from a distant subterranean interruption enters my body through my heart chakra which is located in the lower half of my sternum. If I completely cover my heart chakra with my hand, I do not register any signal from a remote site with this same lack of response occurring when I am field dowsing. Once a signal has been received, it is interpreted by my subconscious brain which communicates with my conscious brain through the ideomotor effect causing body movements that are not under my conscious control. There is also a range limit involved in map dowsing as I am unable to detect any signals coming from areas more than about 800 km away.

How I map dowse

I begin by finding the property to be dowsed on the Queensland Business website – “Bore reports” which shows the property on a satellite image which has been overlaid by the property boundaries and the location of bores in the area. Examples of these modified satellite images can be seen in the two figures below.

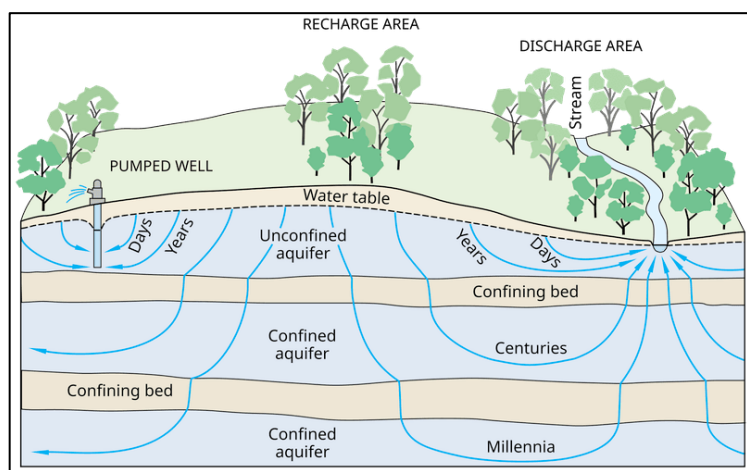

During the dowsing process, I ask questions that tell my subconscious brain what I want it to find out. It responds via the ideomotor effect causing involuntary movements of various body parts that my conscious brain can comprehend.

To start, I ask if there are any aquifers or underground streams within the property boundary. If there are, my head will nod and if not, it will shake. I register a count of the number of underground streams on the property on my fingers and search for their location by moving the tip of a pen along the property boundary. It stops automatically under the influence of the ideomotor effect when I locate one. I track streams in both direction from my start point to see where they terminate and where the aquifer that supplies them with water is located. Once I find the aquifer, I establish its boundaries.

Schematic of an aquifer showing confined zones, groundwater travel times, a spring and a well, public domain

I print off a map of the property being dowsed and its surrounds and then mark on it the locations of all the streams and aquifers I find as shown in the figures below. Following this, I mark the current location of the water within each stream on the map. When the water is not present at the terminal end of the stream, this often indicates that the stream is sloping upwards from the aquifer. During droughts when water levels in aquifers fall, the water in sloping streams retreats towards the aquifer, potentially causing a bore to go dry. To establish the slope of streams, I hold out my left arm horizontally and with my right hand move my pen along the stream's location on the map starting at the low end.

Next, I research what information is available about existing bores in the area by accessing data on the website listed above. This site shows bore locations and bore characteristics such as depth, flow rate and water analysis. I am particularly interested in bores which draw water from the same aquifer as the streams I have detected on the property being dowsed as water quality and stream depth will be similar. I eliminate any streams from selection for drilling if the salt content in the water is too high.

Finding the Right Spot

My next task is to evaluate all remaining streams and select the one that will most likely result in drilling success. I gauge the width of streams using my hands as a measure and combined with the probable depth of the streams, determine if the driller is likely to intercept them when drilling. I try to select a stream where the water is currently at its terminal end to increase the chance that a bore drilled into it will still flow in dry times. Where the water is not at the stream's terminal end and there are no alternative streams to choose from, I see how close a bore could be drilled to the aquifer that supplies the stream with water. The size and location of aquifers is also important. I prefer to select streams supplied by aquifers that are large and underlay bodies of permanent surface water that store runoff water from extensive water catchment areas.

After choosing the most suitable underground stream to be drilled, I select several suitable drill sites along its length and mark these on the map. I then look for botanical or geological features close to these sites that will act as reference points when I later conduct a field search. If the areas near my selections are devoid of reference points, I record the GPS coordinates for each location.

Once I am satisfied that there is a high probability of drilling success, and the bore will be productive into the future, I contact the landholder and organize a field visit. Here, I locate my preferred drill sites using my reference points or GPS coordinates along with my dowsing rod. I then choose the drill site that will produce the most water, but which is also in a user-friendly location for the driller while meeting the landholder's needs.

I have included two case studies below that demonstrate how I apply the map dowsing concepts described above.

Case Study Number 1

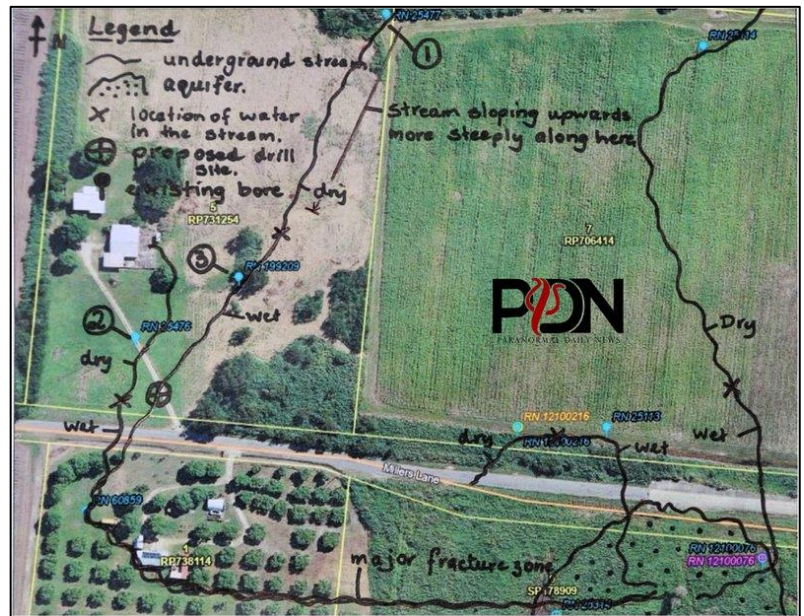

I was contacted by a client who was considering purchasing the rural property located in the top left-hand corner of Figure 1 shown below. The current property owners relied on bore water for their water supply as harvesting rainwater from the roofs of buildings was not an option due to the high risk of pesticide contamination of the water, the result of aerial spray drift originating from nearby farms. Two of the three bores on the property (bores 1 and 2) had gone dry and the third one (bore number 3) was suffering from a low flow rate. Multiple bores had been drilled in the area, and their locations are shown by blue markers that resemble the shape of paddle pops.

The client was seeking my advice on whether they should purchase the property, and if they did buy it, where a suitable location would be to drill a reliable bore.

I detected two streams on the property and two on the adjacent farm and tracked these back to a single aquifer located on the southern side of Miller's Lane. I was able to detect the current location of the water in each stream and determine that four of the bores that had been drilled on the distal ends of these streams had gone dry.

This was because all the streams were sloping upwards from the aquifer once they turned towards the north and the water level in the aquifer had fallen causing the water to retreat within the streams.

Appraising Possible Locations

The site was drilled and the driller struck the three streams I predicted would be intercepted. The bore yield was 15 500 gallons per hour (about 70 000 L/hr) which was enough to operate a travelling irrigator. Stream 1 contributed the most to the total flow volume and was obtained from a honeycomb of fractured basalt rock about 30 feet thick. The combined salt content of the water was well within the acceptable range to grow sugar cane.

This case study highlights how valuable map dowsing is in providing a large body of information that a dowser can use to make informed decisions about the dowsing process.

Conclusion

Map dowsing has many advantages compared with traditional field dowsing and results in the efficient use of the dowser’s time and the landholder’s capital. The wise application of the information map dowsing makes available to the dowser results in a significant reduction in the number of dry bores being drilled.

The true value of a map dowser is their ability to gather enough information to determine the location of drill sites that will result in the establishment of productive and reliable bores with such sites being the best available on the property.

What is USPA?

The United States Psychotronics Association (USPA) is a federally recognized, nonprofit 501(c)(3) organization founded in 1975 to serve as a focal point for scientific and technical exploration of the universe of esoteric, spiritual, and psychic arts in the United States of America.

The USPA has been hosting annual conferences for its membership since its formation and has featured countless individuals with cutting-edge viewpoints, research, or theories to share, allowing any interested persons to openly discuss their work.

What is Psychotronics?

USPA defines psychotronics as the science of mind-body-environment relationships, an interdisciplinary science concerned with the interactions of matter, energy, and consciousness.

Psychotronics involves the study, research, and applications of the physics and technology of the mind, brain, spirit, consciousness, and the underlying forces of life and nature – hence the term “psychotronics.” A true understanding of the universe must include the spiritual as well as the technical. USPA provides an opportunity for amateur researchers to present their findings along with the professionals.

USPA stresses research, with documentation of results, and practical applications, rather than personal experience and unsupported hypotheses.

J.G. Gallimore’s Books are Still Available on Amazon - through assistance from USPA

Jerry G. Gallimore was one of the founders of the USPA in 1975, and was a leading researcher in psychotronics and unusual energies until his untimely death in 1989.

All five of J.G. Gallimore’s rare books on psychotronics subjects and unusual energies have been reprinted by the United States Psychotronics Association (USPA) and are being made available at a fraction of the cost that used copies were being sold at online. Available at Amazon.com USPA Shares in the income from these sales.

So rare have these books been, that only a few libraries in the entire world had them in their collections, and some original Gallimore’s books were being sold for several hundred dollars each online. However, with these newly reprinted volumes, each will be available for less than $30.00.

The Handbook of Unusual Energies: Volume	ISBN-13: 978-1543024999	The 1st book of 3 on unusual energies	468 Pages
Gallimore discusses in depth the research, discoveries, and inventions of all the major researchers in subtle energies, the aether, biological 62 fields, pyramid energy, radiesthesia, radionics, crystal transduction, and related subjects. These include the works of Baron von Reichenbach's and his odic energy, Dr. Wilhelm Reich's orgone energy, Dr. Harold Burr's biological life fields, Kozyrev's time mirror, Edgar Cayce's transmission of energy, and related research done by many others. Of particular importance is Gallimore's 127-page chapter on radionics. In this chapter he discusses in depth the research and devices of Ruth Drown, T. Galen Hieronymus, Rho Sigma, Dr. L. P. Corte, and other prominent people in the radionics field.
Collected Properties & Writings of J. G. Gallimore: Volume 2	ISBN-13: 978-1543025040	The 2nd book of 3 on unusual energies	258 Pages

This is the second book in the "Unusual Energies" series that J.G. Gallimore published. It covers Gallimore's research on Albert Abrams, the founder of modern radionics, psychological physics, psychic energy, thought resonance, subtle energies, crystals, and related subjects.

In addition, a number of radionics devices are discussed, such as the De La Warr Diagnostic Instrument. And very helpfully, the rates are provided for substances, body organs, and medical diseases and disorders. I very interesting interview of Christopher Bird, conducted by J.G. Gallimore is provided, as well as a discussion of Walter Russell and his research

Relationship Between Parapsychology and Gravity: Vol. 3	ISBN-13: 978-1543024944	The 3rd book of 3 on unusual energies	228 Pages

This book describes in depth the research and theories of J.G. Gallimore into the question of "parapsychology transmission" -the question of how such things as telepathy, remote viewing, ESP, and similar phenomena can physically occur. He discusses the various emanations, radiations, and energy fields of all matter and life including the ancient Chinese energy called "chi" (qi), the ancient Indian's prana energy, Reichenbach's "odinic force," Gurwitsch's "mitogenic radiation,"

Wilhelm Reich's orgone energy, and other subtle energies. He shows how these energies are similar, how they interact, and how they are related to gravity. He also discusses crystals as transducers of these energies, and provides diagrams of devices that could potentially be used to harness or control these energies.

Transverse Paraphysics: The New Science of Space, Time, and Gravity Control	ISBN-13: 978-1543024920	Gallimore's fourth book	374 Pages

This book covers the visionary research and theories developed by J.G. Gallimore about anti-gravity, space, time, and biophysics. He discusses in depth the dimensions of space, time, and gravity, and new discoveries in each of these areas. In addition, he covers research being done on anti-gravity and then discusses anti-gravity patents that have been obtained.

He also discusses the intriguing concept of aura energy fields surrounding humans and other living things, and how extra-sensory perception (ESP) might be explained through biophysical principles.

Unified Field Theory Research Book: Using Subjective Response to Psi-Plasma	ISBN-13: 978-1543024838	Gallimore's Fifth book	134 Pages
--	----------------------------	------------------------	-----------

This book is about psychotronics, radionics, electromagnetic fields and waves, psi-plasma, plasma fields, subtle energies, bio-electromagnetic energy, and other unusual energies emitted by living and non-living things. It also is about how living things interact with and are affected by these energies, which may enhance or harm health.
